PENSIERO DOMENICALE

Essere cristiani significa vivere una vita di fede, conformare il proprio modo di pensare e di agire agli insegnamenti del Vangelo; in qualche modo significa lanciarsi in un'avventura che ricorda quella di Abramo, il capostipite del popolo ebraico: egli abbandona tutto per seguire la chiamata di Dio. Indubbiamente si tratta di una cosa difficile! Ma ciò è indispensabile se vogliamo realizzare la nostra vocazione di battezzati: incontrare il Signore e vivere con lui in una intimità di amore. Saremo capaci di simile generosità, di simile disponibilità, ascoltare pienamente il Signore, per poter compiere la missione ch'egli ci affida? Questa è la sua chiamata! Quale sarà la nostra risposta?

Transfiguration

It's a warm Spring afternoon and an elderly couple are gently walking along the edge of a park, they are holding hands, yet visibly no words seem to be exchanged between them. Is it perhaps that they have all been already said, or that they know each other so well!

Getting to know a person can take some time, and yet even then there seems more to know about the person. For the disciples, getting to know Jesus wouldn't have been quite so easy, particularly when one day he would be at his authoritative best on the mount of the Beatitudes, the next day he would be stating that suffering awaited him in Jerusalem, and on another day he would be their gentle host as they ate their last meal together.

For a privileged few there would be an exclusive experience on the mountain of transfiguration. As Peter James and John saw Jesus transformed, their attitudes to Jesus would have also been transformed. We could say that this is what Lent is all about, transforming ourselves and our attitudes so that we can see Jesus more clearly.

It is what our Opening Prayer says, "...restore our sight that we may look upon our Son who calls us to repentance and a change of heart..."
